Which Box Do You Check?

- We are serving more autistic students every year and we want to be more adept at supporting them.
- Our neurodivergent students are eager to start their post-college careers, and we want to learn about preparing them for employment
- I am the leader of an autism initiative and I want to meet and connect with some kindred spirits on other campuses.
- I am a neurodivergent undergraduate student interested in advocating for myself and others like me, and helping to build a national network of students to support our cause.
- I'm a researcher with an interest in autism, neurodiversity and higher education, and I want to learn what other researchers are thinking about.
- I'm an employer and I know my organization will benefit from being more inclusive of neurodivergent talent.
- I've never been to Pittsburgh but I hear it's great.

If any of these are you, then you need to be at the College Autism Summit in Pittsburgh, PA, November 2-5. The College Autism Network is excited to host our 9th annual Summit in this great city. Come find out why so many attendees have called the Summit “my favorite professional event,” “the place where I’ve made my best connections,” and “learning wrapped in community” (all actual quotes).

Our early registration rates end on September 7. After that, the Summit will still be wonderful, but slightly less of a bargain.
